Political conversation is very important on this campus. There are beliefs that have wider ranges than what we think. The contest provides a really good incentive. I don’t think there are any negative aspects of briefly talking about an experience that shapes how you view elements of democracy or democracy itself. It allowed me to reflect on a situation that was out of my memory for the most part. But looking back on that situation, it did impact how I view our government and our basic foundations of this country.
